FINED THE LEMON-SUCKER.
A Demoralized Street Band Gets Revenge in Court.

Joker's Antics Made Their Mouths Pucker So They Couldn't Play.

John Garner, of 379 South Second street, was fined $5 in the Lee Avenue Court, Williamsburg, to-day on a charge of assaulting Samuel Snyder, of 76 Monroe avenue, the leader and cornet player of a street band.

The fight was the outcome of what Garner thought was a joke, but which Snyder and his fellows considered a very serious matter. While they were playing in front of a saloon at 78 Harrison street, anticipating beer at least and possibly cash, Garner, who considers himself a practical joker, went to the street with a lemon in his hand, and, leaning against the saloon post, sucked the lemon. As all musicians know, this will pucker the mouth of a horn-blower, and the musicians say Garner was acting maliciously.

At any rate, just as the melodious strains of "Mollie and I and the Baby" were being wafted towards the atmosphere of New York Creek, the cornet player's left eye caught sight of Garner and his lemon, and just then the water came into the saloon, and a beautiful variation in a high scale came out, like the noise of steam bubbling through water.

The cornet player looked disgusted, and as the saloon door was open, bystanders say he looked fiercely at Garner and said something very emphatic. There was another trial, however, but this time the man who handles the bass horn, and who is a very capable player, could not help but gaze at Garner with the result that neither could make a note. The drums, which were being played by a man named Snyder, were also being played by a man named Snyder, and the evidence in court this morning was that the musicians were gazed unmercifully.

At any rate, Snyder lost his temper, as his lips assumed an uncontrollable pucker, and he went to the saloon door and told the man who handles the bass horn to go away. Garner simply took another lemon from his pocket, however, and handing it to Snyder, remarked:

"Have one on me."

This was more than even a musician could stand, so Garner pushed Snyder towards the street. Then the man with a lemon became serious, and it is alleged, he thrashed the cornet player. Policeman Gaughan arrested him, and in court to-day Snyder was fined five dollars, and it was stated, but the fact is, however, that the man was particularly severe on account of the joke.

FOUND A LONG-LOST CANE.

It Was Stolen From Mr. Hildal Twenty-three Years Ago.

Hugh B. Hildal, an old man, living at 117 Madison street, Brooklyn, went to Property Clerk Harriott's office at Police Headquarters, this morning, and claimed an ebony, gold-headed cane, which was stolen from him nearly a quarter of a century ago.

The cane, which bore the initials of Mr. Hildal, was confiscated by the police of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street station, last night, from a house known as the "Harlem Battle," at 253 East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street, where a fight was in progress. The cane was found in the house which the police say was the rendezvous of a gang of thieves.

On the morning of the seizure, a man named John McGrath was found in the house with a supposed bullet wound in the mouth. Several arrests were made, and the cane, with the other property, was taken away. A description of the stick published in the newspapers caught Mr. Hildal's eye.

On an "Evening World" reporter Mr. Hildal said about twenty-three years ago he lived on Eleventh street, near Eighth avenue. Two days after he was shot, some one coming for him, and after the job had been completed he missed his cane.

GOT A "KNOCKER-OUT."

Schorley, Twelfth street and Third avenue, last night.

Greenbaum thinks he got a "knocker-out" in the saloon. He was too ill to appear in court this morning. The woman was remanded until to-morrow.

Mrs. Langley to Be More Specific.

Ed-Judge Reynolds, representing Mrs. Langley, this morning obtained permission from Justice Koch to file an amended complaint in the suit for divorce. Mrs. Langley has brought against her husband, William Langley, a well-known Brooklyn club man. Judge Reynolds says he is more specific as to the dates of Langley's alleged wrong doing.

MAKES ITSELF FELT.
The great, gripping, old-fashioned play. Not only when you take it, but unpleasant, from first to last, and it only gives you a little temporary good.

The things to take its place are Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. One of these at a dose will regulate the whole system perfectly. They're tiny, sugar-coated granules, gentler than mustard seeds. They act in Nature's own way. No reaction afterward. Their help lasts, and they're permanent good. Constipation, indigestion, biliousness, headache, dizziness, nervousness, all ailments of the liver, stomach, and bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured.

They're the cheapest, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction or your money is returned. Nothing else can be "just as good."

TO DIG UP THE CELLAR

Stagg Street Police Will Investigate Mrs. Winters's Story.

Midwife Griessman Held for Examination for Malpractice.

"I Held My Tongue Until She Sued for Rent," Says Mrs. Winters.

Justice Murphy, in the Lee Avenue Civil Court, Williamsburg, to-day held Mrs. Lena B. Griessman, for examination, on a charge of malpractice. The story of how the woman is accused of having performed a criminal operation on her own daughter, and then burying the child in the cellar, was told in "The Evening World" yesterday.

The police of the Stagg street station were at the house to-day, but have done nothing as yet towards digging up the cellar, where other bodies are alleged to have been buried. Yesterday they asserted that they would commence at once, but nothing came of it.

The house is a three-story frame, double tenement, and in the rear of it is a two-story house. Altogether there are fourteen families in both dwellings, and all of them keep their coal, wood, &c., in the cellar of the front house. Consequently the police of excavating the cellar cannot be started until everything has been removed.

The police, on the strength of whose statement the arrest was made, told the same story to-day, that she had buried the child in the cellar, and had heard about Mrs. Griessman making the cellar a graveyard for infants, and when she accused the midwife of it the woman admitted it, and promised Mrs. Winters a grave for her child, and when she would only keep quiet about the matter.

"I held my tongue until she sued me," said Mrs. Winters, who is now in court.

Mrs. Winters testified that she knew Mrs. Griessman's daughter was ill, and that since then the Griessmans had sometimes told her the child was buried in the cellar, and other times that it had been removed by an undertaker.

Further examination was postponed until next Thursday, and Mrs. Griessman was held without bail until that time.

THIEF AND PLUNDER CAUGHT.

$1,000 Worth of Stolen Vests Captured in a Wagon.

Two of the Robbers Escaped, but One Was Less Fortunate.

A policeman of the Liberty avenue station, Brooklyn, saw three men driving rapidly in a small covered wagon along Christopher street, near Eastern Park-way, at 4 o'clock, this morning. The policeman called upon them to stop. Two of the men jumped out and disappeared in the darkness. The other was preparing to follow when the policeman seized him. The prisoner said he was Samuel Fellinger, twenty-two years old, of 42 Orchard street, New York. He refused to tell the police what he was doing in East New York, or where his companions were. In the wagon were several large bundles of clothing and two rolls of cloth which the police value at $1,000.

Isaac, who has a stable at 42 Orchard street, rented a covered wagon and horse yesterday to a man giving himself the name of Sallinger and his residence 128 Delancey street. Sallinger said he wanted the outfit for two days, and he paid $4 for the two days.

The wagon was taken to the police station, and the contents were examined. It was found that the wagon was loaded with stolen goods, and the police value at $1,000.
